Following are a number of prominent personalities among Yugoslav emigrants living in Czechoslovakia who are loyal to the Cominform:

Slobodan IVANOVIC, editor of the newspaper "Nova Borba," was born in 1910 in BELGRADE. He was a leader of the leftists at BELGRADE university and an advocate of the Communist Party in the leftist movement of agricultural workers under Dr. Drago JOVANOVIC. He was brought to Germany in 1941 as a PW, escaped in late 1941, and went to Bosnia, where he joined a unit of Chetniks. In March 1942, he fled to the 1st Proletarian Brigade of Koca POPOVIC. Sent by the party to the area of KOSVO-RETORHIA. he was appointed deputy district leader in VUCIURN, under the alias of "Milan SIMIC." In 1944 he went over to the partisans, and in 1945 became a member of the temporary "People's Assembly." He was sent to WASHINGTON as a press attache. Immediately after the Cominform Resolution, he declared himself an opponent to TITO, left WASHINGTON for PRAGUE, and became one of the most respected Yugoslav Communists among the emigrants.

Miljutin RAJKOVIC, nickname "MICA," was born in Vojvodina. He became a district official in 1931, and then went to NOVI SAD, where he was one of the most prominent Communists. After 1941, he was active in the organization of partisans, and when the Communists came to power, he became deputy editor of "Politika," a BELGRADE newspaper. He was a noted chessplayer, and was chairman of the Yugoslav Chess Club. RAJKOVIC was on a trip to Sweden, as captain of a chess team, at the time of the Cominform Resolution. He went to PRAGUE, and declared himself against TITO. He is now deputy chief editor of "Nova Borba."

Dr. Josip MILUNIC, deputy editor of the newspaper "Nova Borba," was born in Croatia, and worked with the Communists before the war. When the independent state of Croatia was established, he joined the police by order of the Communist Party, and was appointed District Chairman in KOSTANJICA. In late 1942, he was transferred to the general staff of partisans in Croatia, and became one of the chiefs
